Company Growth During Repossession Decline Risk Analysis & Proactive Services are Key

CITRUS HEIGHTS, CA, July 12, 2011 – In a recent analysis of trends in the auto industry, TransUnion reports: ‘On a state-level basis, 46 states experienced a drop in their quarter-to-quarter delinquency rates, while only two states showed an increase on a year-over-year basis’. According to Experian Automotive, both 30 and 60 day auto delinquencies dropped in Q4 2010. Is it possible that a Repo Remarketing could see growth of 46% in 6 month over 6 month growth?

Repo Remarketing has done just that, citing analysis of risk versus benefit with clients, and using the newest in proactive services as key. In a recent interview, Jodie Dawson, Director of Repossessions for Repo Remarketing revealed that although their credit union partners had seen a decrease in overall repossessions, there had been an increase in ‘hard to find’ cases. Some credit union members are using a creative variety of methods to conceal the vehicles and avoid repossession. Jodie recommends starting with an analysis of the risk (age, mileage, condition and type of vehicle) versus the benefit (salability). From there, Jodie stressed that using top performing agents, skip tracing professionals and the newest technology such as License Plate Recognition, as a must. With the right service tools in place, credit unions can look for a tangible difference in their bottom line.

Claudia Plascencia, Senior Vice President of Repo Remarketing, reports that their growth success can be attributed to ‘providing end to end service solutions’ to their clients. Claudia further stated, ‘The success that our clients have experienced is based on our experience in the industry – from skip tracing and repossession to transport and reporting through to remarketing.’
